STRABAG Australia Pty. Ltd. has signed an agreement to acquire KEE Surfacing, part of the KEE Group, marking a step forward in strengthening its long-term presence in the Australian transport infrastructure market.

The proposed acquisition brings together STRABAG's global experience in road construction, materials production and asphalt technology with KEE Surfacing's established Western Australian surfacing capability, which is supported by approximately 70 employees. KEE Surfacing is recognised for its asphalt laying and production, spray seal, profiling and base course services, with a track record supporting major road, freeway and infrastructure projects across Western Australia.

STRABAG sees the potential acquisition as highly complementary to its Australian growth strategy. It adds proven local delivery capability in asphalt surfacing while creating opportunities to introduce STRABAG's broader materials, technical and sustainability expertise to support clients across road, transport and complex engineering projects.

Bringing global expertise to Australia

Globally, STRABAG combines large-scale in-house materials production with advanced technical expertise, operating a network of asphalt mixing plants, quarries and gravel pits to reliably supply aggregates, bitumen products and high-quality asphalt mixes for infrastructure projects. This capability is underpinned by specialist materials technology centres and laboratory networks that optimise asphalt performance, enable recycling and sustainable production methods, and support innovative applications across road, transport and complex engineering projects.

Completion of the transaction remains subject to customary conditions.

■ KEE Surfacing has built a strong reputation for quality, safety and productivity in the Western Australian market. This proposed acquisition is a natural fit with STRABAG's global capability in asphalt, materials and infrastructure delivery, and supports our ambition to bring innovative, sustainable and technically advanced solutions to clients in Australia. We are delighted to welcome the KEE Surfacing team into the STRABAG family following completion.
